The screenshot shows a GitHub pull request interface. At the top, a comment from user 'xjix' is displayed, dated 8 Mar 2017. The comment text discusses the need for support for Exif:ImageDescription and Exif:UserComment in thunar translators, suggesting libexif as a better alternative. Below the comment, a commit titled 'Add support for Exif:ImageDescription and Exif:UserComment' is shown, with commit ID 'bd4a326'. A checkmark icon indicates that user 'f2404' has approved the changes on 8 Mar 2017. A 'View changes' button is visible next to the approval. At the bottom, a response from 'f2404' states 'Looks good to me. @landryb @ochosi Please review.'

This time it's all political correct ;-)
Obviously, thunar translators probably need to add support for this two new entires.

IMHO it was better to use libexif versions because this was already translated there and if needed thunar translators could help to improve libexif library.
